DO NOT LIE DOWN. DO NOT ROLL OVER.

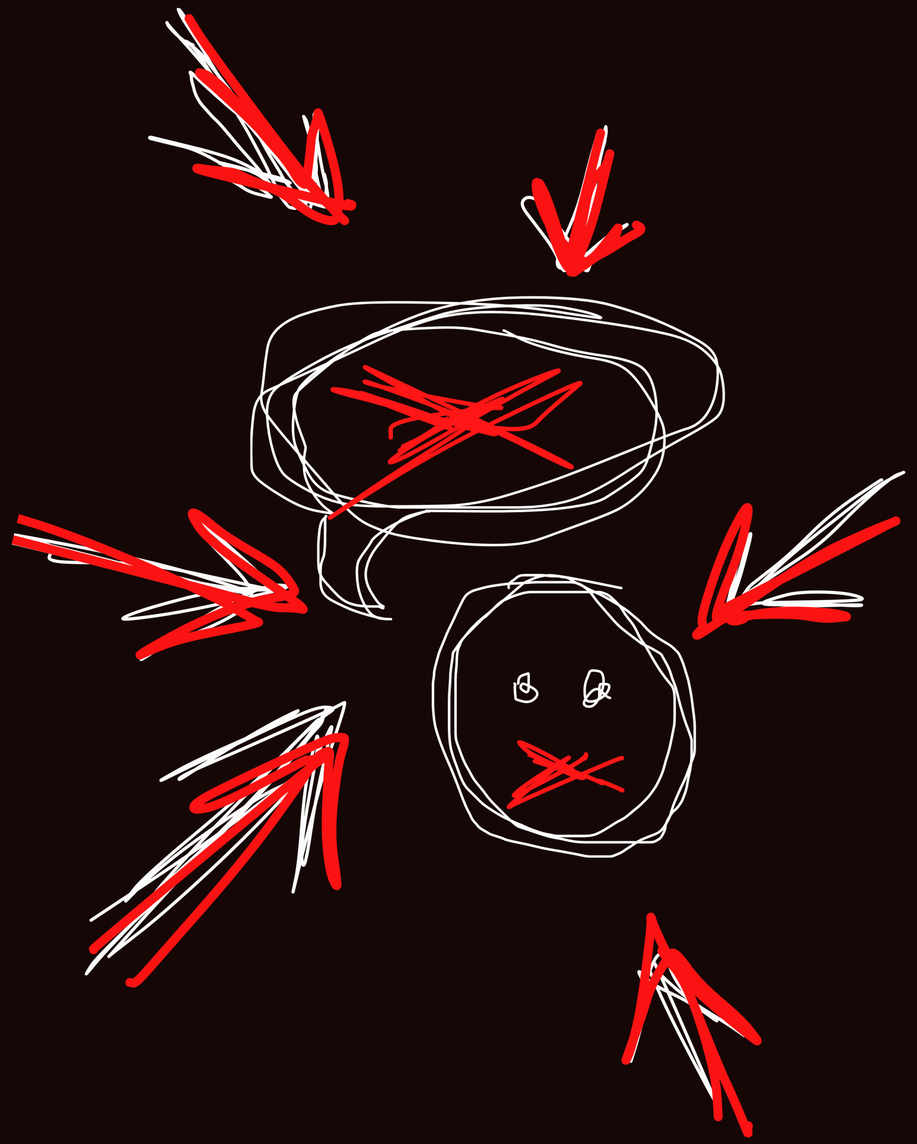
DO NOT LIE DOWN. DO NOT ROLL OVER.

The people in your life do not see you how you are. You know this because you experience it every day. Each time you interact with someone, it is a gamble whether or not they see you the way you see yourself. They will never truly understand, but sometimes they will try.



Only sometimes.

This is a game about how far you get into knowing someone before their true colors are shown.

You can use this to represent any form of betrayal or breaking of trust, but it is about being misgendered by someone you like. Someone you love, even. For that reason, you should be playing with that in mind, but no one will stop you from using it as catharsis for some other emotions.

The game ends when you roll a 20, or when the emotions are too strong for you to handle on your own.

At this point, destroy the paper you have been using to play. If you're playing digitally, delete the document. Permanently. If you're playing physically, tear it up, shred it, burn it, do whatever you need to destroy it. Let the rage and destruction exist. They are healthy.

PLAY THE GAME BEFORE IT PLAYS YOU.

Roll the listed die. On the highest possible number, answer the questions and move on to the next.

Roll a d4. On a 4, answer the following questions:
- How did you meet this person?
- What made you click right away?

Roll a d6. On a 6, answer the following questions:
- What did this person do that made you laugh?
- What did you tell this person about your gender?

Roll a d8. On an 8, answer the following questions:
- What did this person do that made you trust them?
- How did your bond grow stronger?

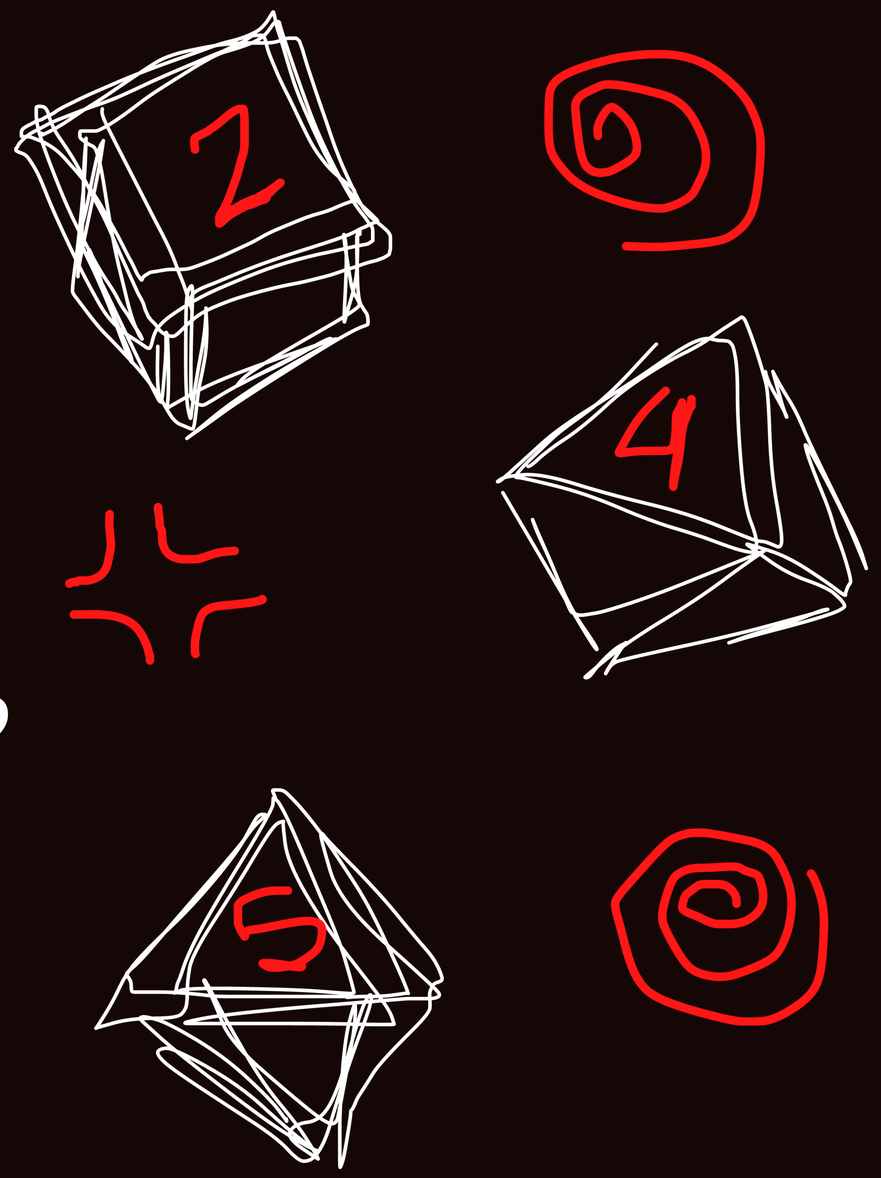
Roll a d10. On a 10, answer the following questions:
- What secret did you tell them?
- What are some things you associate closely with them?

Roll a d12. On a 12, answer the following questions:
- How long have you two known each other now?
- What is your favorite thing about them?

Roll a d20. If it's a 20, end the game. They have never misgendered you, as far as you know.

If at any point you roll a number that is not the highest possible on the die, answer these questions and start from the beginning again, with an entirely new person.

- Who is this person to you?
- What was the context of them misgendering you?
- Who else witnessed it, if anyone?
- What about you made them misgender you?
- How did you react?



ANGER IS DRAINING.

When you've finished playing, and after you've destroyed all remains of this game other than the ones in your head, treat yourself. Relax. Get yourself some good food, buy that game you've been wanting forever, drink some water. You don't need permission to do these things, but it's helpful in the worst of times. Take care of yourself. No one else is going to do it for you.
